

For the final project, improving on project 2 would be interesting. Embellishing the program and fleshing it out so it can consider a range of diseases/programs with the same structure (mostly diseases, possibly a polymer functionality as well). Each program has its own defaults. One interesting thing would be to create a runnable file or shell that can be used. Using that structure could be much more interesting and allow a much easier way for useful programs to have an audience.